Healthy Workplace Environment
Spaces that attract and retain employees
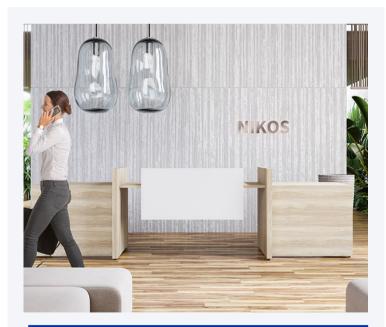

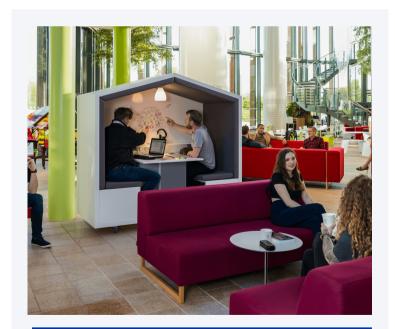

ACCENT ENVIRONMENTS

Offices need to be designed in a way that attracts and retains employees. As much as it is essential to have a well-designed space for new visitors or business clients, workspaces are meant to do more than that. An office space plays a vital role in a company's culture and motivation and productivity of employees. It is so important to design flexible workspaces to accommodate all needs.

Let's consider the spaces and their importance...

Reception

Reception areas welcome guests and provide a place for meetings and social interaction. Make first impressions count with a welcoming reception desk!

Small Meeting Areas

Small meeting areas are important for a place where people can exchange and brainstorm ideas. Or use these small areas when an individual needs a quiet space to absorb themselves in the task at hand.
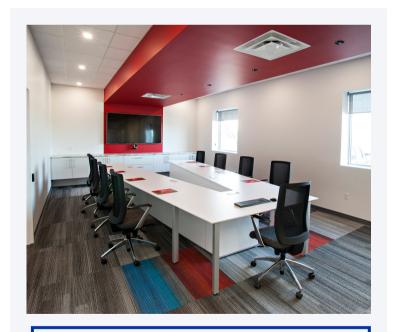

Workstations

Create a variety of spaces for different types of workers. Include private offices for employees that need a totally quiet space, open offices for those that thrive on background activity, and semi-private for those that like a bit of both!
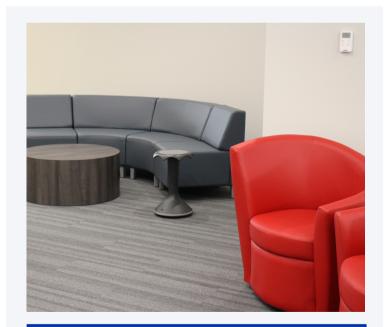

Training Rooms

Training and personal development are a fundamental part of growing a company. Have a space that is dedicated to this.

Conference Rooms

Conference rooms are an ideal place to discuss confidential information, hold video conferences, or a place for a team to meet.
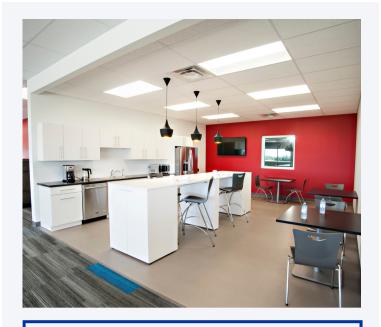

Creative/Brainstorming Space

Get the creative juices flowing in this room! Add some soft seating, large whiteboards for interaction, and mobile tables so a team can rearrange room depending on the task at hand. This space needs movement seating or standing height tables to keep the engagement high.
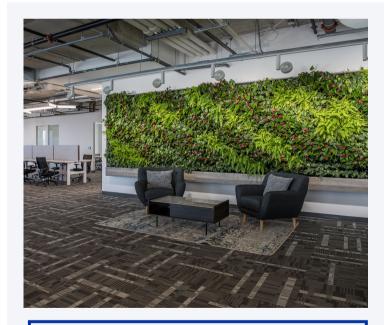

Ergonomics

It is vital to set up workplaces with quality, ergonomic furniture to ensure employees stay healthy and comfortable. Use furniture like height-adjustable desks, movement seating, or soft seating to ensure they are comfortable at all times.

Breakroom

We all need a break from work to eat, relax, and socialize during the day. This is where the breakroom comes into play. Add this space to ensure employees can get refreshed and reenergized.

Accessories

Having accessories like plants adds vitality to a space and can improve employees' health. Good acoustics also play a key part in helping reduce background noise so that employees are more productive. Appropriate lighting can improve accuracy and concentration and reduce fatigue and headaches.

Relax Area

Incorporating a 'fun' area where employees can take a quick break to get motivated or have some down-time can be an important part of the office environment. Relying on teamwork and engaging in healthy competition enhances a company's culture.

Reach out to start designing your office space today!
We would love to help you create a space to that inspires and motivates your people. Because motivated people = success